

We Need To Talk

REPLACING FEAR WITH CLARITY WHEN GIVING FEEDBACK

Giving and Receiving Feedback: We Need to Talk

Ever cringed at the phrase, “We Need to Talk”? Or recoiled from a stinging feedback memory? You’re in good company – the realm of feedback can be a minefield for many! But what if we told you feedback could be a golden opportunity? A chance to cultivate growth, both in others and yourself.

A fully customizable session

We recommend:

 In-person or online  3hrs  Up to 20 people

What you’ll learn & do

This workshop empowers your teams to:

- Understand what effective, behaviour-based feedback actually sounds like
- Learn and practice the WISER™ Feedback Model in a safe, structured environment
- Recognize how timing, tone, intent and context change how feedback lands
- Navigate power dynamics and cross-cultural differences so feedback lands fairly
- Explore how AI can help refine clarity, tone and phrasing before a difficult conversation

94% of participants would recommend our workshops

Who is this workshop for?

- People managers, project managers and team leaders who give feedback as part of the role
- Anyone who wants to build feedback skills, to feel better giving it and get better results from it
- New managers who find difficult conversations the hardest part of the role
- Teams wanting a shared model, so feedback conversations stop depending on who's giving them

What this workshop offers

- A model, not just mindset. The Think Productive WISER™ Feedback Model gives a structure to fall back on, not just good intentions.
 - Learning that lasts. Every participant gets access to the Productivity Ninja® Academy.
 - A format that fits. 3 hours, in person or live online, for up to 20 people.
 - AI as an ally. Practical ways to use AI to prepare for and practice difficult conversations before they happen.
-

What you'll do

You'll start with the difference between coaching, feedback and input, and what actually makes feedback land, the mindset and characteristics behind a genuinely good feedback experience, not just theory. From there, you'll learn the WISER™ Model and practice it in a safe, encouraging environment, preparing for and delivering feedback the way you'll actually need to back at work.

You'll also tackle the realities that make feedback harder in practice: navigating cross-cultural differences in how feedback is given and received, managing power dynamics so it lands fairly across hierarchy, and what to do when feedback doesn't land the way you intended. You'll leave with a framework for planning and holding difficult conversations, and the confidence to use it sooner rather than putting it off.

What happens when feedback works

When teams build a shared model for feedback, everything changes:

- Difficult conversations happen sooner, before small issues turn into bigger ones
- Feedback lands as intended, instead of landing badly and getting avoided next time
- People stop softening feedback into vagueness, and say what actually needs saying
- Power dynamics and cultural differences stop derailing conversations that matter
- Feedback starts to feel like a normal part of working life, not a rare, risky event

Boots

"I think it's a great blueprint for success."

Tudor Powell

Benefits & Results

The most immediate benefit is a framework: a repeatable structure for feedback conversations that doesn't depend on who's delivering it or how confident they're feeling that day. But the deeper shift is cultural. Once a team shares a model and a language for feedback, honest conversations stop being rare, risky events and start becoming normal working life.

What your organization gets

Managers who address issues sooner rather than avoiding them, feedback that builds trust instead of eroding it, and a team culture where honest conversations happen as a matter of course, not as a last resort.

BOOTS UK

"They're the sort of soft skills that are easy to be aware of needing to improve, but actively taking the time to address that is a welcome opportunity."

Why it matters

Most people haven't been taught how to give feedback, only what happens when it goes badly, and that one bad memory shapes every conversation after it.

- One difficult past experience makes both giving and receiving feedback feel risky, so people avoid it or soften it into vagueness
- Without a shared model, feedback conversations become inconsistent, some land well, others land badly, and nobody's sure why
- Power dynamics and cultural differences go unaddressed, so feedback that's meant to help ends up landing unfairly or unevenly

"It gave me a clear process and actionable steps to take forwards, as well as room for deep discussions."

Hannah Searle

University of Exeter

Your workshop. Your way.

We recommend a 3-hour workshop for a team of up to 20 people, but like all our workshops, it can also be tailored to your exact needs.

Available options:

Formats

In-person | Online

Group size

Recommended: up to 20 | Keynote: Unlimited

Duration

Recommended: 3 hours | Keynote: 90 mins–2 hours